

Appendix 2: Feedback

Me: So after watching the video explaining the apps and using the apps for 1 week what do you think in general about the application?

Client: “I do think it amazing how you are able to add all my problems into one single application for a solution. I like the visual style component of pink which is very eye soothing. The table may be chunky but it exceeds my initial expectation. I don’t have to repeat my input, saving my time. Also, the visual indicator is amazingly done. I especially love the pie chart. It looks very professional as for the line graph. It is certainly what I thought of when I told you how to track ovulation dates despite the problem that we initially discussed”.

Me: Firstly, what do you think about the login system?

Client: Good, similar to a normal registration system so easy to use and understand. I’m used to it.

Me: What do you think about the looks of the main page?

Client: Good design. I like it. Look friendly and minimalistic. The colour pink fit very well.

Me: What do you think about the calculator at the top does it match your expectations?

Client: I may not have to use it soon but it was pretty fun to use seeing the progress bar goes up would be very exciting if I were to have a baby, but it would be better if it’s saved after changing the tab or close

Me: As for the ovulation tracker, what do you think about the design?

Client: Good, table a bit chunky but understandable heading except the word “mens” could be misleading.

Me: Do you think adding in data is easy? simple?

Client: Yes, There unit and there is a background text telling me what to put in Me: How about deleting data?

Client: I mean in term of click and delete is easy but if it a lot then it get pretty hard

Me: As for the ovulation tracker, does it match your expectations?

Client: Match the expectation

Me: As for the ovulation tracker, is the line graph suitable to represent data?

Client: Yes, it is like what I originally thought and you executed it very well, but one day I forgot to measure my temperature and I noticed that in the line graph it skipped that day. Other than that little thing it's amazing.

Me: As for the planner, does the format meet your expectations?

Client: Yes, I initially thought you are going to make a planner for each month and year like a real calendar but this also works and is very easy to use. It could be better if I was able to click on the box and edit it from there, but more importantly, is the delete button, this implies to all components but after a week I want to reset my planner I have to delete all of them manually which is quite time-consuming.

Me: As for the planner, Is inputting data appropriately? Do you need more information?

Client: Yes, I think I didn't encounter any problem with inputting data and the error message that pops up can help those who don't understand what is wrong with the input

Me: As for the nutrient, does the design meet your expectations?

Client: Yes, I do think the table matches the nutrient table more than the ovulation tracker given that spreadsheets style. I like the summary table of the day. It is very easy to use and understand and I can greatly see my progression. I like the Pie chart the most though as it is visually good and make data more unique

Me: As for the nutrient, is it easy to log and input data?

Client: Yes, there is invisible text to indicate which box is for what and unit to tell and relatively simple

Me: As for the nutrient, what do you think about data being gone after a day?

Client: I think it is ok as I don't really want it to be messy and keep it clean to show clearly what I eat today only. But I don't know, I guess sometimes I want to see what I eat for that day as I want to remember it.

Me: Do you think overall the apps are easy to use?

Client: Yes simple like I said I do think the delete all button would benefit a lot as I sometimes get lazy deleting all the data set.

Me: What do you think about the security system of user ID and password?

Client: I do think it is more than enough, pretty safe in my opinion.

Me: So where do you think I can Improve or further develop?

Client: I have listed a few improvements you could do. So firstly is the delete all button. For the ovulation calendar, I do think you could add a phone notification system. I don't know if this is possible but it will greatly help me discipline myself to do it. There is not much more for the ovulation tracker. As for the planner, I do think that the color choice is somewhat too bright or sometimes too dark that I can't even see the text. I recommend that you just choose a set of colors, probably 10, that match the pink background theme. I would like to see an extra event namely temperature measurement as I would plan myself when to measure my temperature as it would need to be at the same time for each day to give accurate data. Also as for my schedule, I do think it should be earlier and later around 6-12 as that is when I wake up and sleep when I have a baby to take care of. Lastly for the nutrient if possible you should standardize the nutrient intake for a different pregnant lady. If they are skinnier they would have different ones that are more fat. This also brings to that table to show what the diet should be, as I couldn't even get a healthy meal a single time. I want to know what the balanced diet criteria look like.
